

"Can I have a bucket for my birthday?" asked Billy.

Billy's dad looked up from his newspaper.

"A bucket? You don't want a bucket for your birthday, nobody has buckets for their birthday."

"Why don't they?" asked Billy.

"Because, Billy," explained his mum, "buckets are . . . well, buckets are far too bucketty to be a birthday present."

