

My Inukshuk

An inukshuk (or inuksuk) is made of stones or boulders placed on top of one another to create a figure, usually for the purpose of communicating with others to help in navigation and hunting. They are an important part of Inuit culture. In fact, an inukshuk is on the Nunavut flag. Inukshuks have been found to exist as early as 2400 to 1800 BCE.

Instructions

Cut out the stones and glue them in the frame to create your own inukshuk. Afterwards you can draw a background to your inukshuk to give it context.
