

Identifying Animals

Today we will be...

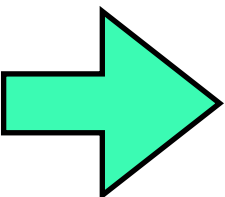

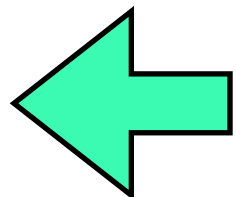

Identifying and comparing common UK birds and reptiles.

What is similar and what is different about these two animals?

Which do you think is the bird, which is the reptile?

This is a robin.
It is a bird.

This is a type of snake called an adder. It is a reptile.

A bird has feathers, wings and a beak. They are warm-blooded and lay eggs. Most birds can fly. Birds are vertebrates. This means they have backbones.

A reptile has dry, scaly skin. They are cold-blooded vertebrates. Most reptiles lay eggs. Reptiles can be snakes, lizards, crocodiles, turtles or tortoises.

Can you remember any characteristics that birds
and lizards share?
What was the same?

Can you remember any characteristics that birds and lizards did not share?
What was different?

Did you find more similarities or differences?

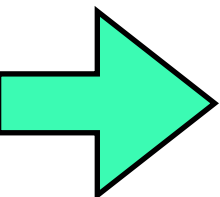

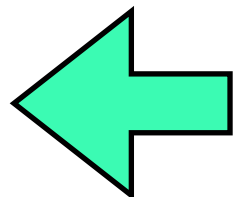

We are going to play a game now.
Can you guess if the animals we describe are birds or reptiles?

Is this a bird or a reptile?

It lays eggs.
It is warm-blooded.
It likes to eat
insects and worms.
It has feathers.

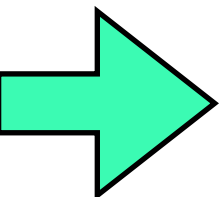

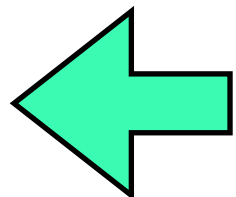

It was a bird! This bird is a blackbird.

Is this a bird or a reptile?

It has dry, scaly skin.
It is cold-blooded.
It lives near water
and eats frogs and toads.
It lays eggs.

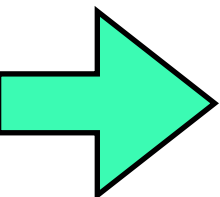

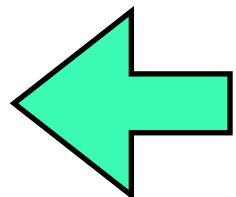

It was a reptile! This reptile is a grass snake.

Is this a bird or a reptile?

It has dry, scaly skin.
It is cold-blooded.
It likes to hide under things.
It eats slugs and worms.

It was a reptile! This reptile might look like a snake, but it is a limbless lizard called a slow worm.

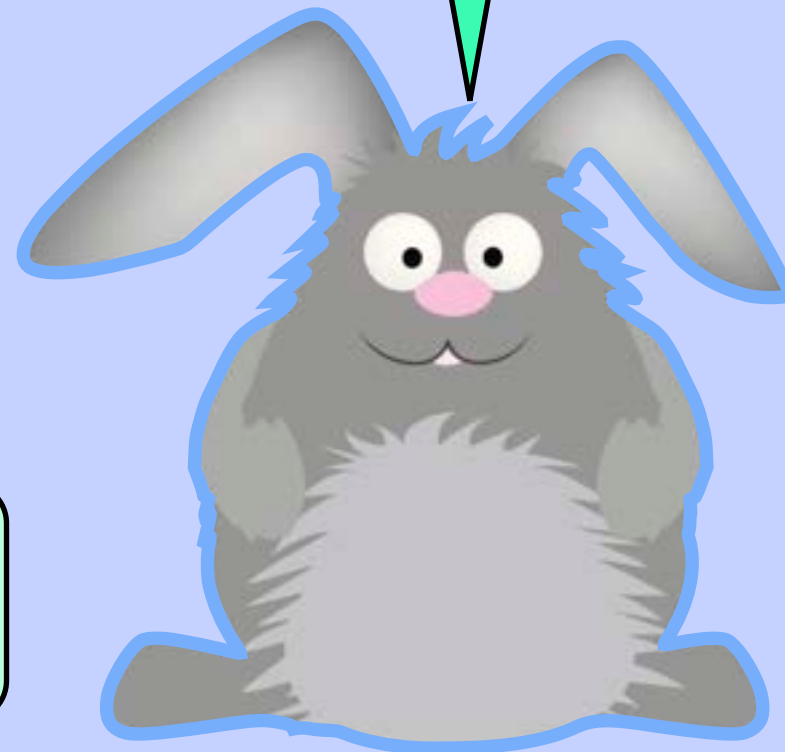

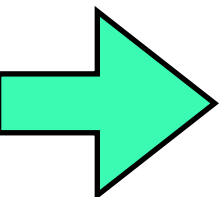

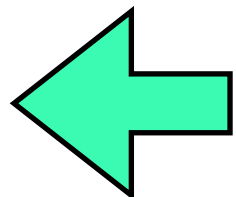

Birds have feathers.

Birds lay eggs.

Which of these statements isn't true?

Birds have arms.

Which of these statements isn't true?

Reptiles have dry, scaly skin

All reptiles have legs.

Reptiles have a backbone.

