🤍 Hello Yellow: Every Feeling Has a Colour 🤍

As part of our Hello Yellow celebrations, we have been thinking about our feelings and the different colours we might use to describe them. Some days we might feel yellow: happy, hopeful and full of sunshine. Other days we might feel green and calm, or blue and a little sad. Sometimes our feelings might be red, grey or even black when we feel angry, worried, overwhelmed or simply not quite ourselves. And that is OK. There are no "wrong" feelings. What matters is recognising how we feel and knowing that we do not have to keep difficult feelings to ourselves. Talking to someone we trust, whether that is a friend, family member or trusted adult in school, can help us make sense of what we are feeling and begin to find a little more colour and light. 🤍

Kindest wishes, Mrs Charman
